NO. 561

A SERMON
DELIVERED BY THE REV. C. H. SPURGEON,
AT THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE, NEWINGTON.

“You shall make His soul an offering for sin.”
Isaiah 53:10.

BOTH Jews and Gentiles knew pretty well what an offering for sin meant. The Gentiles had been in the habit of offering sacrifices. The Jews, however, had by far the clearer idea of it. And what was meant by a sin offering? Undoubtedly it was taken for granted by the offerer that without shedding blood there was no remission of sin. Conscious of guilt, and anxious for pardon, he therefore brought a sacrifice, the blood of which would be poured out at the foot of the altar—feeling persuaded that without sacrifice there was no satisfaction, and without satisfaction there was no pardon. Then, the victim to be offered was, on all occasions, a spotless one. The most scrupulous care was taken that it should be altogether without blemish—for this idea was always connected with a sin offering—that it must be sinless in itself; and being without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, it was held to be a competent victim to take the offender's place. That done, the victim being selected, the offerer put his hand upon the sin offering—and this indeed, was the essence of the whole transaction—putting his hand on the victim, he confessed his sin, and a transference took place, in type at least, from the offender to the victim. He did as it were put the sin from off his own shoulders on to those of the lamb, or the bullock, or the male goat, which was now about to be slaughtered. And, to complete the sin offering, the priest draws his knife and kills the victim, which must be utterly consumed with fire. I say, this was always the idea of a sin offering, that of a perfect victim; without offense on its own account, taking the place of the offender; the transference of the offender's sin to the victim, and the expiation in the person of the victim for the sin done by the offerer.

Now, Jesus Christ has been made by God an offering for sin and O that tonight we may be able to do in reality what the Jew did in metaphor! May we put our hand upon the head of Christ Jesus, and as we see Him offered up upon the cross for guilty men, may we know that our sins are transferred to Him, and may we be able to cry, in the ecstasy of faith, “Great God, I am clean! Through Jesus' blood I am clean!”

I. In trying, now, to expound the doctrine of Christ's being an offering for sin, we will begin by laying down one great axiom, which is, that SIN DESERVES AND DEMANDS PUNISHMENT.

Certain divines have objected to this. You are aware, I suppose, that there have been many theories of atonement, and every new or different theory involves a new or different theory of sin. There are some who say that there is no reason in sin itself why it should be punished, but that God punishes offenses for the sake of society at large. This is what is called the governmental theory, that it is necessary for the maintenance of good order that an offender should be punished, but that there is nothing in sin itself which absolutely requires a penalty. Now, we begin by opposing all this, and asserting, and we believe we have God's warrant of it, that sin intrinsically and in itself demands and deserves the just anger of God, and that that anger should be displayed in the form of a punishment. To establish this, let me appeal to the conscience—I will not say to the conscience of a man who has, by years of sin, dwindled it down to the very lowest degree, but let me appeal to the conscience of an awakened sinner, a sinner under the influence of the Holy Spirit. And are we ever in our right senses, brethren, till the Holy Spirit really brings us into them? May it not be said of each of us as it was of the prodigal—“He came to himself”? Are we not beside ourselves till the Holy Spirit begins to enlighten us? Well, ask this man, who is now really in the possession of his true senses, whether he believes that sin deserves punishment, and his answer will be quick, sharp, and decisive—"Deserve it," says he, "yes, indeed; and the wonder is that I have not suffered it. Why, sir, it seems a marvel to me that I am out of hell, and Wesley's hymn is often on my lips—

'Tell it unto sinners, tell,
I am, I am out of hell.'

"Yes, sir," says such a sinner, "I feel that if God should strike me now, without hope or offer of mercy, to the lowest hell, I should only have what I justly deserve; and I feel that if I am not punished for my sins, or if there is not some plan found by which my sin can be punished in another, I cannot understand how God can be just at all! How shall He be the Judge of all the earth if He allows offenses to go unpunished?"

There has been a dispute whether men have any innate ideas, but surely this idea is in us as early as anything, that virtue deserves reward, and sin deserves punishment. I think I might venture to assert that if you go to the most degraded race of men, you would still find, at least, some traces of this—shall I call it tradition—or is it not a part of the natural light which never was altogether eclipsed in man? Man may put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter, darkness for light, and light for darkness, but this follows him as a dog at the heels of its master—a sense that virtue should be rewarded, and that sin must be punished. You may stifle this voice, if you will, but sometimes you will hear it, and terribly and decisively will it speak in your ears to say to you, "Yes, man, God must punish you; the Judge of all the earth cannot allow you to go scot free." Add to this another matter, namely, that God has absolutely declared His displeasure against sin itself. There is a passage in Jeremiah, the 44th chapter and the 4th verse, where He calls it, "That abominable thing which I hate." And then, in Deuteronomy, the 25th chapter, at the 16th verse, He speaks of it as the thing which is an abomination to Him. It must be the character of God that He has a desire to do towards His creatures that which is equitable. "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" If there is anything in them which deserves reward, rest assured He will not rob them of it; and, on the other hand, He will do the right thing with those who have offended, and if they deserve punishment, it is according to the nature and character of a just and holy God that punishment should be inflicted; and we think there is nothing more clear in Scripture than His truth that sin is in itself so detestable to Him, that He must and will put forth all the vigor of His tremendous strength to crush it, and to make the offender feel that it is an evil and a bitter thing to offend against the Most High. Beware, you who forget God in this matter, lest He tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you! Sin must be punished.

The other idea that sin is only to be punished for the sake of the community involves injustice. If I am to be damned for the sake of other people, I object to it. No, sir, if I am to be punished, justice says, at any rate, that it shall be for my own sins; but if I am to be eternally a castaway from God's presence merely as a sort of trick of government to maintain the dignity of His law, I cannot understand the justice of this. If I am to be cast into hell merely that I am to teach to others the tremendousness of the divine holiness, I shall say there is no justice in this; but if my sin intrinsically and of itself deserves the wrath of God, and I am sent to hell as the result of this fact, I close my lips, and have nothing to say. I am speechless; conscience binds my tongue. But if I am told that I am only sent there as a part of a scheme of moral government, and that I am sent into torment to impress others with a sense of right, I ask that someone else should have the place of preacher to the people, and that I may be one of those whose felicity it shall be to be preached to, for I see no reason in justice why I should be selected as the victim! Really, when men run away from the simplicities of the gospel in order to make Jehovah more kind, it is strange how unjust and unkind they make Him! Sinner, God will never destroy you merely to maintain His government, or for the good of others! If you are destroyed, it shall be because you would not come to Him that you might have life; because you would rebel against Him; because sin from stern necessity did, as it were, compel the attribute of divine justice to kindle into vengeance, and to drive you from His presence forever! Sin must be punished.

The reverse of this doctrine, that sin demands punishment, may be used to prove it, for it is highly immoral, dangerous, and opens the floodgates of licentiousness to teach that sin can go unpunished. O sirs, it is contrary to fact. Look! O, if your eyes could see, tonight, the terrible justice of God which is being executed now, if these ears could but hear it, if you could be appalled for a moment with—you would soon perceive that God is punishing sin! And if sin deserves not to be punished, what is hell but injustice on a monstrous scale? What is it but an infinite outrage against everything which is honest and right, if these creatures are punished for anything short of their own deeds? Go and preach this in hell and you will have quenched the fire which is forever to burn, and the worm of conscience will die. Tell them in hell that they are not punished for sin, and you have taken away the very sting of their punishment! And then, come to earth and go, like Jonah went, though with another message than Jonah carried, through the highways and the broadways, the streets and thoroughfares of this exceedingly great city, and proclaim that sin is not to be punished for its own intrinsic desert and baseness! But if you expect your prophecy to be believed, enlarge the number of your jails, and seek for fresh fields for transportation in the interests of society, for if any doctrine can breed villains, this will! Say that sin is not to be punished, and you have unhinged government; you have plucked up the very gate of our common prosperity; you will have been another Samson to another Gaza, and we shall soon have to rue the day. But, sirs, I need not stop to prove it; it is written clearly upon the consciousness of each man, and upon the conscience of every one of us, that sin must be punished. Here are you and I tonight brought into this dilemma. We have sinned; we all like sheep have gone astray, and we must be punished for it. It is impossible, absolutely, that sin can be forgiven without a sacrifice! God must be just if heaven falls. If earth should pass away, and every creature should be lost, the justice of God must stand—it cannot by any possibility be allowed to be impugned. Let this, then, be fully established in our minds.

*“The sullen groans and hollow moans,
And shrieks of tortured ghosts,”*

You need not to be told, as for the first time, that God in His infinite mercy has devised a way by which justice can be satisfied and yet mercy can be triumphant. Jesus Christ, the only-begotten of the Father, took upon Himself the form of man, and offered unto divine justice that which was accepted as an equivalent for the punishment due to all His people.

II. Now, the second matter that I wish to bring under your notice is this, THAT THE PROVISION AND ACCEPTANCE OF A SUBSTITUTE FOR SINNERS IS AN ACT OF DIVINE GRACE.

It is no act of grace for a person to accept a financial debt on my behalf of another person. If I owe a man 20 pounds, it is no matter to him, whatever, who shall pay the 20 pounds, so long as it is duly paid. You know that you could legally and at once demand a receipt and a release from anyone who is your creditor as long as his debt is discharged, though it is discharged by another, and not by you. It is so in financial matters, but it is not so in penal matters. If a man is condemned to be imprisoned, there is no law; there is no justice which can compel the lawgiver to accept a substitute for him. If the sovereign should permit another to suffer in his place, it must be the sovereign's own act and deed; he must use his own discretion as to whether he will accept the substitute or not, and if he does so, it is an act of charity. In God's case, if He had said in the infinite sovereignty of His absolute will, “I will have no substitute, but each man shall suffer for himself, he who sins shall die,” none could have murmured. It was grace, and only grace which led the divine mind to say, “I will accept a substitute; there shall be a vicarious suffering, and My vengeance shall be content and My mercy shall be gratified.”

Now, dear friends, this grace of God is yet further magnified, not only in the allowance of the principle of substitution, but in the providing of such a substitute as Christ—on Christ's part that He should give up Himself, the Prince of Life, to die; the King of Glory to be despised and rejected of men; the Lord of angels to be a servant of servants, and the Ancient of Days to become an infant of a span long. Think of the distance—

*“From the highest throne in glory,
To the cross of deepest woe,”*

and consider the unexampled love which shines in Christ's gift of Himself! But the Father gives the Son. "God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." To give your wealth is something, if you make yourself poor, but to give your child is something more. When the patriot mother tears her son from her bosom and cries, "Go, my first-born, to your country's wars; go and fight until your country's flag is safe, and the hearths and homes of your native land are secure," there is something in it, for she can look forward to the bloody spectacle of her son's mangled body, and yet love her country more than her own child! Here is heroism, indeed. But God spared not His own Son, His only-begotten Son, but freely delivered Him up for us all. "God commends His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." I implore you; do not look upon the sacrifice of Christ as an act of mere vengeance on the Father's part! Never imagine, oh, never indulge the idea that Jesus died to make the Father satisfied towards us! Oh, no, dear friends, Jesus' death is the effect of overwhelming and infinite love on the Father's part, and every blow which wounds, every infliction which occasions sorrow, and every pang which rends His heart, speaks of the Father's love as much as the joy—the everlasting triumph which now surrounds His head!

Let us add, however, to this, that although Jesus Christ's dying as a substitute does give to Him lawful right to all promised privileges, and does make Him, as the covenant head of His people, a claimant of the divine mercy, yet it does not render any of the gifts which we receive from God, any the less gifts from God. Christ has died, but still, everything that we receive comes to us entirely as a gratuitous outflow of God's great heart of love. Never think you have any claim to anything because Christ purchased it. If you use the word claim at all, let it always be in so humble and modified a sense that you understand that you are still receiving not of debt but of grace. Look upon the whole transaction of a substitute, and of Christ becoming the Second Adam as being a matter of pure, rich, free, sovereign grace, and never indulge the atrocious thought, I pray you, that there was justice and justice only, here; but do magnify the love and pity of God in that He did devise and accomplish the great plan of salvation by an atoning sacrifice.

III. But now, to go a step further, and then with as much brevity as possible. The Lord established the principle of substitution, having provided a substitute, and having through Him bestowed upon us gratuitously innumerable mercies, therefore let us observe THAT JESUS IS THE MOST FITTING PERSON TO BE A SUBSTITUTE, AND THAT HIS WORK IS THE MOST FITTING WORK TO BE A SATISFACTION.

Let every sinner here, who desires something stable, to fix his faith upon, listen to these simple truths of God, which I am trying to put as plainly as possible. You do understand me, I trust, that God must punish sin, that He must punish you for sin unless someone else will suffer in your place, that Jesus Christ is the person who did suffer in the place of all those who ever have believed on Him, who do believe in Him, or ever shall believe in Him, making for those who believe on Him a complete atonement by His substitution in their place. Now, we say that Christ was the best person to be a substitute; for just consider what sort of a mediator was needed. Most absolutely, he must be one who had no debt of his own. If Christ had been at all under the law naturally, if it had been His duty to do what it is our duty to do, it is plain He could only have lived for Himself; and if He had any sin of His own, He could only have died for Himself, seeing His obligations to do and to suffer would have been His just due to the righteousness and the vengeance of God. But on Christ's part, there was no natural necessity for obedience, much less for obedience unto death. Who shall venture to say that the divine Lord amidst the glories of heaven owed to His Father anything? Who shall say it was due to the divine Father that Christ should be nailed to the accursed tree, to suffer, bleed, and die—and then be cast into the grave? None can dare to say such a thing; He is Himself perfectly free, and therefore can He undertake for others. One man who is drawn for the militia cannot be a substitute for another person so drawn, because he owes for himself his own personal service. I must, if I would escape, and would procure a substitute, find a man who is not drawn, and who is, therefore exempt. Such is Jesus Christ. He is perfectly exempt from service, and therefore can volunteer to undertake it for our sake. He is the right person.

There was needed, also, one of the same nature with us. Such is Jesus Christ. For this purpose He became man, of the substance of His mother, very man, such a man as any of us. Handle Him and see if He is not flesh and bones. Look at Him, and mark if He is not man in soul as well as in body. He hungers; He thirsts; He fears; He weeps; He rejoices; He loves; He dies; Made in all points and like unto us, being a man and standing exactly in a man's place, becoming a real Adam, as true an Adam as was the first Adam, standing quite in the first Adam's place, He is a fit person to become a substitute for us.

But please observe, (see if you cannot throw your grappling hooks upon this), the dignity of His sacred Person made Him the most proper person for a substitute. A mere man could at most only be a substitute for one other man. Crush him as you will, and make him feel in his life every pang which flesh is heir to, but he can only suffer what one man would have suffered. He could not, I will venture to say, even then, have suffered an equivalent for that eternal misery which the ungodly deserve; and if he were a mere man, he must suffer precisely the same. A difference may be made in the penalty, when there is a difference in the person, but if the person is the same, the penalty must be precisely and exactly the same in degree and in quality. But the dignity of the Son of God, the dignity of His nature, changes the whole matter. A God bowing His head, and suffering, and dying in the person of manhood, puts such a singular efficacy into every groan and every pang, that it needs not that His pangs should be eternal, or that He should die a second death. Remember that in financial matters, you must give a quid pro quo—but in matters of penal justice, no such thing is demanded. The dignity of the person adds a special force to the substitution, and thus, one bleeding Savior can make atonement for millions of sinful men and women. The Captain of our salvation can bring multitudes unto glory!

It needs one other condition to be fulfilled. The person so free from personal service, and so truly in our nature, and yet so exalted in person, should also be accepted and ordained of God. Our text gives this a full solution in that it says, “He shall make His soul an offering for sin.” Christ did not make Himself a sin offering without a warrant from the Most High—God made Him so. “The Lord has laid on Him the iniquity of us all.” It was the sovereign decree of heaven which constituted Christ the great substitute for His people. No man takes this office upon himself. Even the Son of God stoops not to this burden uncalled. He was chosen as the covenant head in election. He was ordained in the divine decree to stand for His people. God the Father cannot refuse the Sacrifice which He has Himself appointed. “My son,” said good old Abraham, “God shall provide Himself a lamb for a burnt offering.” He has done so in the Savior; and what God provides, God must and will accept.

I wish tonight that I had power to deal with this doctrine as I would. Poor trembling sinner, look up a moment! Do you see Him there—Him whom God has set forth? Do you see Him in proper flesh and blood fastened to that tree? See how the cruel iron drags through His tender hands! Mark how the rough nails are making the blood flow profusely from His feet! See how fever parches His tongue and dries His whole body like a potsherd! Do you hear the cry of His spirit, which is suffering more than His body suffers—“My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me?” This is none other than God's only-begotten Son! This is He who made the worlds! This is the express image of His Father's person, the brightness of Jehovah's glory! What do you think, man? Is there not enough there to satisfy God? Truly it has satisfied God—is there not enough there to satisfy you? Cannot your conscience rest on that? If God's appointed Christ could suffer in your place, is it not enough? What more can justice ask? Will you now trust Christ with your soul? Come now, sir! Will you now fall flat at the foot of the cross, and rest your soul's eternal destiny in the pierced hands of Jesus of Nazareth? If you will, then God has made Him to be a sin offering for you! But if you will not, beware, lest He, whom you would not have to be your Savior, should become your Judge and say, “Depart you cursed one, into everlasting fire in hell!”

IV. We come now to our fourth remark—THAT CHRIST'S WORK, AND THE EFFECTS OF THAT WORK ARE NOW COMPLETE.

Christ becomes a substitute for us. We have seen how fit and proper a person He was to be such. We hinted that, from the dignity of His Person, the pains He suffered were a good and sufficient equivalent for our own suffering on account of sin. But now, the joyous truth of God comes up that Christ's work is finished! Christ has made atonement, so complete, that He never need suffer again! No more drops of blood, no more pangs of heart, no more bitterness and darkness, with exceeding heaviness even unto death are needed—

"It is done, the great transaction's done."

The death-knell of the penalty rings in the dying words of the Savior, "It is finished." Do you ask for a proof of this? Remember that Jesus Christ rose again from the dead. If He had not completed His work of penalty-suffering, He would have been left in the tomb till now. Our preaching would have been in vain, and your faith would have been in vain—you and I would have been yet in our sins. But Jesus rose! God's sheriff's officer let Him out of "durance vile" because the account had been discharged, and God's great Court of King's Bench sent down the decree to let the captive go free. More than that; Christ has ascended up on high. Do you think He would have returned there with unatoned sin red upon His garments? Do you suppose He would have ascended to the rest and to the reward of an accomplished work? What? Sit at His Father's right hand to be crowned for doing nothing? And rest until His adversaries are made His footstool when He has not performed His Father's will? Absurd! Impossible! His ascension in stately pomp, amidst the acclamations of angels, to the enjoyment of His Father's continued smile, is the sure proof that the work is complete.

Complete it is, dear brethren, not only in itself, but, as I said, in its effects. That is to say, that there is now complete pardon for every soul which believes in Christ! You need not do anything to make the atonement of Christ sufficient to pardon you! It says no eking out; it is not as if Christ had put so much into the scale and it was quivering in the balance—your sins, for all their gravity, utterly ceased their pressure through the tremendous weight of His atonement. He has outweighed the penalty, and given double for all your sins. Pardon, full and free, is now presented in the name of Jesus, proclaimed to every creature under heaven, for sins past, for sins present, and for sins to come, for blasphemies and murders, for drunkenness and whoredom—for all manner of sin under heaven. Jesus Christ has ascended up on high, and He is exalted that He may give repentance and remission of sin. You have no need of shillings to pay the priests; nor is baptismal water needed to effect the pardon; there is no willing, doing, being, or suffering of yours required to complete the task. The blood has filled the fountain full—you have but to wash and be clean—and your sins shall be gone forever!

Justification, too, is finished. You know the difference. Pardon takes away our filth, but then it leaves us naked; Justification puts a royal robe upon us. Now, no rags of yours are needed—not a stitch of yours is needed to perfect what Christ has done! He whom God the Father has accepted as a sin offering has perfected forever those who are set apart. You are complete in Christ. No tears of yours, no penance, no personal mortifications—no, no good works of yours—are needed to make you complete and perfect. Take it as it is! O, sirs, may you have grace to take it as it is freely presented to you in the gospel. "He who believes on Him is not condemned." "There is therefore now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus." Trust Christ! Implicitly trust Christ, and all that He did shall cover you, while all that He suffered shall cleanse you!

Remember, too, that acceptance is finished. There are the Father's arms, and here are you, a filthy sinner. I do not know you, but it may be you have trod the pavements, or you have gone farther than that, and added drunkenness to shame. Perhaps you have gone to the lowest vice, perhaps to robbery. Who knows what manner of person may step into this place? But the great arms of the eternal Father are ready to save you as you are, because the great work of Christ has effected all that is needed before God for the acceptance of the vilest sinner. How is it that the Father can embrace the prodigal? Why, he is fresh from the swine trough! Look at him! Look at his rags—how foul they are! We would not touch them with a pair of tongs! Take him to the fire and burn the filth! Take him to the bath and wash him! Those lips are not fit to kiss—those filthy lips cannot be permitted to touch that holy cheek of the glorious Father! Ah, but it is not so. While he was yet a great way off, his Father saw him—rags and poverty, and sin and filth, and all—and He did not wait till his son was clean, but ran and fell upon his neck and kissed him, just as he was! How could he do that? Why, the parable does not tell us, for it did not run on with the subject to introduce the atonement; but this explains it—when God accepts a sinner, He is, in fact, only accepting Christ! He looks into the sinner's eyes, and He sees His own dear Son's image there, and He takes the sinner in. As we have heard of a good woman, who whenever a poor sailor came to her door, whoever he might be, would always make him welcome because, she said, "I think I see my own dear son who has been these many years away, and I have never heard from him; but whenever I see a sailor, I think of him, and treat the stranger kindly for my son's sake."

So, my God—when He sees a sinner longing for pardon, and desirous of being accepted, He thinks He sees His Son in him, and accepts him for His Son's sake! Do not imagine that we preach a gospel in this place for respectable, godly people. No, we preach a gospel here for SINNERS. I heard the other day, from one who told me that he believed we were saved by being perfect—that when we committed sin, we at once fall out of God's mercy. Well now, supposing that were true, it would not be worth making a large splutter about. It would not be worth angels singing, "Glory to God in the highest," about it, I should think. Any fool might know that God would accept a perfect man. But this is the thing of marvel for which heaven and earth shall ring with the praises of the Mediator—that Jesus Christ died for the ungodly; that Jesus Christ gave Himself for their sin—not for their righteousness—not for their good deeds! If He had looked to all eternity, He could not have seen anything in us worthy of so great a suffering as that which He endured, but He did it for charity's sake, for love's sake.

And now, in His name—O that I could do it with His voice, and with His love, and with His fervor—I do beseech you to lay hold upon Him! No matter who you may be, I will not exclude you from the invitation. Have you piled your sins together till they seem to provoke heaven? Do your sins touch the clouds? Come, and welcome! God has provided a sin offering for you! Has man cast you out? Say, poor woman, does the dreary river seem to invite you to the fatal plunge? God has not cast you out! O you who feel in your own body the effect of your sin till you are loathing yourself, and wishing you had never been born—perhaps you say, like John Bunyan, "O that I had been a frog, or a toad, or a snake, sooner than have been a man, to have fallen into such sin, and to have become so foul!" Have courage, sinner! Have courage! "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." Do not doubt this message! God has sent it to you. Do not reject it! You will reject your own life if you do. Turn at His rebuke! It is a loving voice which speaks to you, and that would speak, perhaps, better and more forcibly if it were not choked with love. I do implore you, sinner, come to Jesus! If you are damned, it is not for lack of invitation! If you will perish, it is not for lack of earnest pleading with you! I tell you, man, there is nothing of your own needed! All this is found in the sin offering—for you need not find it. There is no merit of yours needed; there is merit enough in Christ!

Is it not the old proverb that you are not to take coals to Newcastle? Do not take anything to Christ! Come as you are—just as you are. Tarry not till you go out of this house! The Lord enable you to believe in Jesus NOW; to take Him NOW as a complete and finished salvation for you—though you may be the most sunken, and abandoned, and hopeless of all characters. Why did God provide a sin offering but for sinners? He could not have needed to provide it if there was no necessity. You have a great necessity! You have, shall I say, compelled Him to it; your sins have nailed Christ's hands to the cross; your sins have pierced His heart, and His heart is not pierced in vain; nor are those hands nailed there for nothing! Christ will have you, sinner! Christ will have you! There are some of God's elect, here and He will have you! You shall not stand against Him; Almighty love will have you! He has determined that you shall not do what you have vowed. Your league with hell is broken tonight, and your covenant with death is disannulled. The prey shall not be taken from the mighty, the lawful captive shall be delivered! The Lord will yet fetch you up from the depths of the sea. Oh, what a debtor to grace will you be! Be a debtor to that grace tonight! You who are over head and ears in debt, purge yourself by a simple act of trusting in Jesus, and you are saved!

Pray, you who know how to pray, that this message may be made effective in the hands of God. And you who have never prayed before, God help you to pray now! May He now be found of them who sought not for Him, and He shall have the glory, world without end! Amen. Amen.
